Learning with Adults in an Intercultural Setting

Location/Format: Online

Course Code: INTR 120

Course Description

This unique course examines the growing needs and trends that associate with facilitating cultural diversity in adult learning scenarios. Intercultural education provides a useful theoretical foundation in which to situate the highly engaging and interactive course content. In addition, the course broadens to include practical suggestions, activities and directions on how to encourage and appreciate cultural differences in the classroom, yet maintain a necessary climate of respect. This course utilizes an intriguing multi-media approach towards facilitating class discussions.

Course topics include, but are not limited to, introduction to adult learning principles, power & positionality in the classroom, culture shock, cross-cultural communication, conflict analyses and resolution, and mentoring in culturally diverse settings. This is a highly practical course for educators and/or practitioners who seek to learn how to adequately prepare adults who work or study in foreign contexts or in diverse classrooms. Additionally, this course would be useful for individuals wishing to understand how culture actively plays out in learning. At the conclusion the course, students will possess an intercultural competence towards working and learning with adults in diverse settings.

Online Registration: https://ctecentre.ca

Fees

$575.00 CDN: Tuition fees must be paid in full in order to register in a course.

Course Materials

2. Course Reader, R. Mizzi, ISBN 88880085451

Unless specified, all course materials are available from the Queen’s Campus Bookstore. Visit their textbook search page <http://www.campusbookstore.com/Textbooks/SearchEngine/>. Questions related to your order should be directed to the Campus Bookstore at 1-800-267-9478 or 613-533-2955.